

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus for variable length coding is described. A method comprises receiving a group of data having a group of set values, identifying a group of positions of the group of set values within the group of data without branching, for each of the group of positions, encoding a run of non-set values preceding each of the group of positions.